

LEND ME YOUR EARS

Community-orientated villages of yesteryear have evolved into the sprawling dispassionate urban enclaves of today. Although it is inherent in the nature of man to have a sense of belonging and develop relationships, fewer people even know the names or interact with people who live in the same street. Business too is increasingly conducted telephonically or online. The physical distance between the producers and consumers has increased which further limits communication with each other.

WE NEED TO TALK

SANHA recognised this challenge since its inception over two decades ago. Conferences and exhibitions are still one of the most effective ways to generate positivity, relationship building and community pride through discussion, analysis and networking. Therefore, it readily utilizes the many diverse platforms of exhibitions, conferences, seminars, food and community fairs, talks in Masaajid, schools' programmes etc. to talk and interact with the broader community in the furtherance of its mission to educate and create awareness of Halaal.
